

Bertha Garrett Holliday, Ph.D.

Senior Director, Office of Ethnic Minority Affairs, American Psychological Association

Dr. Holliday is a Community Psychologist interested in African American child and family socialization, research and program evaluation, and mental health and educational interventions who has authored and published more than 65 related technical reports, journal articles and book chapters. She is an authority on psychological issues in ethnic minorities.

She has been awarded more than $4.5 million in federal grants and contracts. She has assumed a variety of professional roles including researcher, professor, evaluator, administrator, and Congressional Fellow. She holds degrees from the University of Chicago, Harvard University, and the University of Texas at Austin and engaged in postdoctoral study at Cornell University. She currently is the Senior Director of the American Psychological Association's (APA) Office of Ethnic Minority Affairs where she supports APA's involvement in both a variety of initiatives related to increasing the participation of ethnic minorities in psychology, and public policy issues affecting the well-being of communities of color throughout the world. Travel, reading, writing, gardening, cooking, and interior decorating are her favorite pastimes.